STOIC Checklist

Periodically throughout the school year, consider using the STOIC Checklist as a simple self-assessment tool. The “T” component, Teach Expectations, outlines the steps for teaching your classroom expectations. Let the following questions guide your assessment and next steps.

Guiding Questions	Yes	No
Are school policies explicitly taught to students? Do students and parents know where this information is located?
Have you created lessons regarding classroom rules and explicitly taught them to students?
Are classroom rules referenced when correcting student behavior?
Have you created lessons regarding classroom procedures and explicitly taught them to students?
Are classroom procedures reviewed throughout the school year? Remember to discuss important procedures with students after extended holiday breaks.
Are you providing consistent feedback to students? Be sure to acknowledge students who perform procedures correctly! What you pay attention to grows!
Have you created lessons regarding common area expectations and explicitly taught them to students? These expectations must also be reviewed over the course of the school year.
